

haa design is a Glasgow-based design firm specialising in architecture, interiors and consultancy.

We have recently won numerous awards for our project at Scotstoun House for Arup Scotland, most notably a 2011 Royal Institute of British Architects award for architectural excellence, and both regional and national design awards from the British Council for Offices. This project involved the sustainable refurbishment and extension to Arup Scotland's headquarters in South Queensferry. Our project for MacRoberts in Glasgow similarly received a BCO Regional award.

Other recent projects have included the interior of a 48 bed flagship care home for South Lanarkshire Council, new offices for Diner's Club in London, McGrigors in Manchester, Chartered Institute of Housing and Dialog Semi-Conductor in Edinburgh, Maclay Murray & Spens, Morgan Stanley, Glasgow City Council and City of Glasgow College in Glasgow, amongst others.

The philosophy of the practice is one of "designing from the inside out", in other words understanding in detail the needs of users, both physical and psychological, how people operate, how they feel and think. This approach is integral to the innovative work that we have carried out in office design and the sensitive projects we have undertaken in care environments and new environments for learning and teaching.
